China radar reported set up near Kalayaan

By Gene Z. Pascasio

A CHINESE warship has run aground on a reef off Palawan while patrolling contested waters in the West Philippine Sea, an Australian newspaper reported yesterday.

The report came as the Philippine government started sending reports that China had installed a powerful radar on Subi Reef, an island 22 kilometers from the Philippine-occupied Kalayaan group of islands in the Spratly archipelago.

The Sydney Morning Herald, citing unnamed Western diplomatic sources, said the People's Liberation Army's naval ship No. 560 became "thoroughly stuck" on a reef at Half Moon Shoal during the previous night.

The warship is a Jianghu-class frigate "that has in the past been involved in aggressively threatening Filipino fishing boats from the area," the Morning Herald said.

The Philippines refers to Half Moon Shoal as Hainan Shoal, which military sources said is only about 100 meters deep.

Asean talks fail with deep splits over China

PHILIPPINES—Days of heated diplomacy at Southeast Asian talks ended in failure on Friday as deep splits over China prevented the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (Asean) from issuing its customary joint statement for the first time in the bloc's 45-year history.

Foreign ministers from the 10-member bloc have been struggling since Monday to hammer out a diplomatic communique, which has held up progress on a separate code of conduct aimed at soothing tensions in the disputed South China Sea (West Philippine Sea).

China claims sovereignty over nearly all of the treasure-rich sea, which is home to vital shipping lanes, but Asean members, the Philippines, Vietnam, Malaysia and Brunei have competing claims in the area.

The long-stalled code of conduct, strongly supported by the United States, is seen as a way of reducing the chances of a spot over fishing, shipping rights or oil and gas exploration tipping into an armed conflict.

P-Noy gives Sona preview to visitors

By Michael Lim Liman

SENATOR PRRP would be approved by its share of the Senate (Senate) on July 13, President Aquino yesterday highlighted before a group of foreign visitors the key achievements of his two-year-old administration. "Inclusive growth" and "inclusive social spending" are the two key pillars of the administration, he said.

His spending has led to strengthened health care, education and social services, the President said. Participants of the 7th North American Ambassadors, Consulate General and Tourism Division Day, who paid a courtesy call to him in Malacañang yesterday.

The economic growth of 6.4 percent posted in the first quarter "inspired the expectations of more, if not all, analysts,"

Mr. Aquino said.

More importantly, this growth has been felt broadly through the economy and not just by a select few, he claimed.

He cited as an example the falling unemployment rate and will meet longer for the whole country, as shown in a recent survey.

According to a latest Manpower Statistics (MPS) survey for the second quarter of 2012, the unemployment rate went down to 26.4 percent in May, the equivalent of 10.7 million unemployed adults. The rate significantly lower than the 36.4 percent unemployment rate recorded in March, at 15.4 million unemployed.

Still, said longer for the whole country from the same survey went down to 18.4 percent in May compared to 23.8 percent in March, the MPS said.

The President also lauded of the increased spending for social services, to the tune of P507.9 billion, or around 23 percent of the entire 2012 budget.

"We are indeed making sure that no one is left behind, and we will be hard to work over the next few years to ensure that this goal. I am very pleased to share that the good news doesn't stop there," said Mr. Aquino.

He talked about putting a lot of work into improving the country's infrastructure to support its tourism, including airports and seaports.

The Department of Public Works and Highways has allocated P14 billion to 2011 and 2012 to maintain, rehabilitate and improve roads leading to all of our tourist destinations.

Mr. Aquino said the public works of infrastructure complemented by the Department of Transportation and Communications, which has focused its attention on upgrading primary and secondary airports, as well as enhancing air traffic management.

Mr. Aquino underscored his commitment to ensure the country's tourism, saying his administration had made good progress in the tourism sector to attract to the country's tourism economic growth.

He reported that in the first six months of 2012 alone, the country saw the arrival of more than 1.8 million tourists, more than half of the daily average of three million arrivals in the year-to-date for last year.

He explained that his administration was putting particular attention to sustainable tourism, "we consciously pursue an agenda of inclusive growth, place the multiplier effect on jobs and the amount of money it brings to our country."

Probers waiting for complainant against Duterte

By RPH

PROBING his role in the death of a fact-finding team may be a better ploy to maintain his status as Mayor Rodrigo Duterte, who drew the ire of human rights activists for having an alleged son-in-law to murder the fact-finding team reportedly sent to help the victims.

Senior Secretary Jesus M. Soler Jr. yesterday revealed a fact-finding team which will include Department of the Interior and Local Government (DILG) officials from Division 11 to go to the bottom of the case.

"I can understand the cry against Duterte's human rights violations, but he must also be subjected to the legal process," Soler said in a statement.

Soler said that in a formal complaint filed last week against Duterte by human rights activists, who were arrested on Monday for allegedly pulling out the fact-finding team to investigate the case in the city and province where last year he was elected.

Facing fake paper

Duterte allegedly denied his critics by claiming to be the owner of a foundation that "saves the nation Philippines," even presenting a fake document to support his claim, the DILG said.

On Tuesday, Duterte reportedly stated that he made his donation call to the city and toward the latter to run the fact-finding team.

The incident raised a cloud of protest from human rights advocates, including Commission on Human Rights chair Erika Manalo and Philippine Bishop Leonardo Ordoñez.

"We are first and foremost to have the formal complaint of Mr. Duterte and the role of the Mayor Duterte before we can make our conclusions and recommendations on the matter," he said.

Duterte's daughter, Grace City Mayor from Duterte, also made headlines last year when she punched a man's chest who is accused for report to put off the endorsement of a recent order to demolish illegal shanties in the city. She later apologized.

AMMAN/REBUT—More than 200 Syrians, mostly civilians, were massacred in a village in the rebellious Hama region when it was bombarded by helicopter gunships and tanks and then stormed by militiamen who carried out execution-style killings, opposition activists said.

If confirmed, it would be the most single incident of violence in 36 months of conflict in which rebels are fighting to topple President Bashar al-Assad and his army or to take the bloodshed has been ignited by fighting between armed powers.

Activists said it took place on Thursday, while the UN Security Council expressed a new resolution on Syria. Washington and its allies said it showed the world he sought peace, but Russia vetoed and accepting their latest draft.

The Damascus-based Leadership Council of Hama said it found the latest draft of the resolution of the UN Security Council was submitted on Thursday to a large number of heavy weapons for the latest program. Activists said it was a sign of heavy weapons for the latest program.

Opposition reports suggested that rebels from the Free Syrian Army were fighting to overthrow Assad, an administration in the village. "More than 200 people fell dead in Hama," they said from Hama.

Leadership by Syria and Hezbollah, activists killing and military operations," the regional opposition group said in a statement on Thursday evening.

Syrian state television said three men by government had been killed in fighting in Hama and accused "armed militant groups" of committing a massacre there.

But activists, an opposition activist from Hama, said he had the news before the reported killing spree but was in touch with militants. "It appears that dozens of civilians have been massacred in villages," he said, adding that the rebels were attacking the village. "We have been told that the rebels have been attacking the village."

"Many families in the town were taken to the mountains," he said, adding that the rebels were attacking the village. "We have been told that the rebels have been attacking the village."

At least 200 people were killed, he said. "The rebels were attacking the village."

at least in a mosque. There are more bodies in the fields, bodies in the street and in houses... People were trying to live from the time the fighting started and whole families were killed trying to escape."

Parade of the aftermath of the reported massacre had yet to appear on activist websites and the report could not be independently confirmed. Syrian authorities severely limit access for independent journalists.

A detailed account by activists has been one of the most dramatic images of the conflict, showing a group of 200 civilians, mostly women and children, were killed in the village of Hama.

"They blockaded the village from all four sides and began violently and randomly firing on houses as a helicopter flew overhead. As the attack began, screaming and sobbing could be heard from the village. Many people were killed in the street in a matter of less than a minute. They even killed the children of the village."

When the rebels began to retreat, the rebels began to retreat. "The rebels were attacking the village."

Bangko Sentral lowers SDA rates

Cost of keeping P1.6T in banks' idle cash

By Michelle N. Garcia

THE BANGKO Sentral Philippines has cut interest rates on funds placed in its special deposit account (SDA) facility, a move seen to push banks to withdraw portions of their more than P1 trillion in idle cash so these could be used for lending.

The reduction in the SDA rates from 3.125 basis points across all maturities, the BSP announced yesterday.

The one-week SDA rate went to 4.00125 percent from 4.0015 percent; the three-month rate to 4.00575 percent from 4.105 percent; and the six-month rate to 4.106125 percent from 4.1075 percent.

The adjustment to the SDA rates is in line with the pricing of the product," BSP Governor Amado T. Tordesillas said, adding that the rate reduction was in keeping with the decline in interest rates globally.

In an analysis, documents from the central bank showed that funds placed in the SDA facility stood at P1.6 trillion.

The cut in the rates followed criticism against the huge amounts of funds parked in the SDA facility. Tordesillas said some of the money must be used by banks to increase their lending. Banks could contribute to boosting economic growth if they would use their excess cash to finance corporate expansion or new businesses.

Banks, however, have remained attached to placing excess money in the SDA facility given its ability to help them generate significant interest income with virtually no risk.

The country's banking sector actually has been lending more to consumer and enterprise, notwithstanding fears of unmet and unmet needs growing at a double-digit pace. Still, economists argued that there was scope for banks to further increase lending given the significant cash parked in the SDA and the increasing financing requirements of the economy.

Monies and more loans might be used to fund infrastructure projects, which the country

Gov't debt burden reached P5.15T in May

By Rosal W. Domingo

THE GOVERNMENT'S debt burden reached P5.15 trillion as of May, increasing by 7.7 percent or P279.11 billion from the level posted in the same month of 2011.

It was also bigger by P72 billion or 1.4 percent from the April level mainly due to a smaller price and a net increase of domestic securities.

With the population estimate of at 95.2 million, according to the National Statistical Commission, the amount of in-debt per capita would mean that each citizen has a share of P54,068.

Documents on total outstanding debt from the Bureau of the Treasury showed that 30 percent or P1,596 billion was borrowed from local lenders.

Domestic debt increased by P17.93 billion or 0.6 percent from the P2,922 billion posted in April. The increase was attributed mainly to the government having issued more local debt papers compared to the volume that was redeemed.

On the other hand, 41 percent or P2,121 billion of total outstanding debt was borrowed in foreign currencies such as dollar, euro and yen. Debt from loans extended by multilateral lenders and official aid from foreign governments, the Philippines also borrowed through the issuance of bonds denominated in those currencies.

Foreign borrowing increased by P53 billion or 2.6 percent from the P2,068 billion owed to overseas lenders in April. The increase in foreign debt was due mainly to the dipmination of the peso against the dollar, which added P70.84 billion to the debt stock.

Likewise, P210 million worth of debt increased in April, but was expected not later to be recorded during that month, based on obligations as of May.

The government paid P2 billion more than the amount of fresh foreign obligations in May, which inspired the increase in borrowing from abroad. The depreciation of the peso and the rise against the dollar also helped push down outstanding

'Asean 5' to grow while Asia staggers

Domestic demand to keep economies robust, says ADB

By Michelle K. Rame

THE ASIAN Development Bank has set its growth forecast for some Asian sub-regions but kept dark for the so-called 'Asean 5,' saying the Philippines and its neighbors will drive global growth as the prolonged debt crisis in the euro zone drags the world economy.

In its latest growth outlook report,

ADB said it is keeping its 5.6 percent average growth projection for this year for the multilateral lending agency's Asean 5' definition, which includes the Philippines, Indonesia, Malaysia, Thailand and Vietnam.

It also maintained its growth forecast for the entire Southeast Asia, which also includes Brunei, Cambodia, Laos, Myanmar and Singapore. This is despite the drag caused by unfavorable external developments, led by the debt crisis in the euro zone that has triggered rise in global oil costs.

"Despite the weaker external environment, growth in Southeast Asia is expected to remain robust, supported by strong domestic demand," ADB said in the report titled, "Southeast Asian Economic Outlook 2012: Growth."

ADB said investments by local firms are rising and household consumption remains robust in the Philippines and the rest of the Asean 5. Domestic demand is thus offsetting the adverse effects of global economic issues on the performance of the economies.

The Philippines and the rest of Asean 5 will serve as growth drivers for Asia and the rest of the world in this year, the developmental institution said.

R.J. David,
Bossing ng Sulit.com.ph

Mula noon hanggang ngayon
nagtutulungan.

It was 2010 and when R.J. David started Sulit.com.ph with his three partners, he knew it was merely to do virtual research. Little did the couple know that it would eventually turn into the country's biggest and strongest e-commerce site. But he didn't know that either. Over the years, the founders helped each other build the business, pushing it to the next level and making it a success story. Today, Sulit.com.ph is a leading e-commerce site in the Philippines. David's partner, Lorraine, is a successful businesswoman. Sulit.com.ph is a success story that is a testament to the power of teamwork.

Indeed, it is amazing how much a little imagination could bring. This is the same secret that powers the country's most trusted business-to-business e-commerce, PLDT partner Sulit is using a product of strong collaboration, whether it be with its investors or among its employees. Moreover, PLDT is proud to have been in front with Filipino Entrepreneurs in creating strong SMEs that take the country's e-commerce programs.

Peso expected to strengthen further in H2

By Rosalyn M. Domingo

THE PESO is expected to strengthen for most of the second semester, starting from a weak July, says last month, according to First Metro Investment Corp. and the University of Asia and the Pacific.

In a joint research note, FIMC and UAP forecast the local currency to trade stronger month after month over the next quarter.

They said the peso is expected to average 45.4 against the greenback in July 41.72 in August, and 41.52 in September.

FIMC and UAP attribute this strong stance to favorable conditions in the financial markets and stable gains in reserves from overseas remittances.

"However, in the year ends, and details of base rate and policy will be allowed to grow between them, while the United States recovers from the second-quarter slowdown with robust growth, the dollar may appreciate in the fourth quarter and to temper the peso's appreciation bias," they added.

They should that data on the peso's 200-day moving average indicates a stable rate, while its 30-day moving points to further appreciation bias.

"This bias may become a reality value because of favorable developments in the euro zone or more positive signals in the expectation of a crash option," FIMC and UAP said.

Last month, FIMC and UAP both noted that the peso would weaken from around P80.81 in August at P81.03 in July and P81.34 in August.

Open access scheme faces more delays

By Aray R. Reyes

THE IMPLEMENTATION of open access and retail competition slated for September this year will likely be delayed further, as certain policies and issues have yet to be resolved to ensure the smooth transition to the scheme. "We're going to take very little time. I don't think it's going to happen this September—it's more likely to happen in December or the window for preparation is getting smaller," said Attilio A. Padilla, senior vice president and head of customer retail services at Manila Electric Co. (Meralco).

Padilla pointed out that, for one, the Department of Energy and the Energy Regulatory Commission have yet to harmonize their respective policies and rules on the rules governing open access.

The rules, he added, may also need a little fine-tuning to ensure that all processes and systems will result in the seamless operation of the scheme.

The Meralco official also noted that they have also not to ensure that their own systems will be able to interface with that of the Philippine Electricity Market Corp. (PEMCO), which will serve as the central clearing body for the open access program.

"Ultimately, we have to interface with these systems but we haven't started. Energy Undersecretary Aurelio Abad earlier said as much as that will still require a meeting in recent July/August and PEMCO to make sure our systems will communicate well," he explained.

In a text message to the Inquirer, Energy Secretary Juan Sumulong G. Gervacio confirmed that the implementation of the open access scheme will indeed be delayed.

According to Gervacio, the implementation "may delay a few months" but the DOE is still targeting to have open access in place "within the year."

No real estate bubble but experts wary

By Yusef R. Soliman

WHILE A CRASH follow the wage? Are we in a bubble that's about to burst? A real estate bubble occurs when valuations begin to increase and reach a point where they outstrip the collective incomes of potential buyers. This causes classic walls in landing and sends values spinning downward.

Foreign investors, however, program themselves and value and value drivers for Hong Kong's property market recently called the phenomenon in a bubble, meaning further that the property situation does not show that the Philippines is in a bubble yet as the local has exhibited strong fundamentals. The real, however, the economy shouldn't be ignored down.

It revealed in houses property of the in-house such as price per sqm, low borrowing rates, concentration on the National Capital Region, transportation projects that lead to-

Budget hotel for Dumaguete's gentle people

By Theresa S. Samarinaga

IT IS not surprising that Dumaguete, regarded as the 'City of the gentle people,' has continuously been loved and sought-after by visitors to this island of Negros Oriental.

From the surrounding scenic view and views along with other attractions in past times, Dumaguete has never failed to draw in thousands of tourists. From time visitors can choose from a string of activities like shopping and whale watching in San Isidro, or climbing the forest Mount London. As the capital of Negros Oriental, Dumaguete City is one of the perfect hang-off points as surrounded by islands, rivers and cities.

With its location, special charm, this city has been a model of some of the visitors as much as a number of them have actually opted to stay here and settle down.

Recently, one property developer was also chosen by the province and the government to build a new hotel in this city, a very distinctive hotel which would become a landmark for the province.

Budget hotel

Industrious and Corp. recently opened its 'Gohotel' Dumaguete to provide visitors who just want to indulge in the unspoiled nature, diving spots and general sense of beauty a budget hotel that has all the necessary amenities needed by visitors.

Gohotel's arrival in Dumaguete City has made the city to be part of the province's new tourism and hospitality. Located within the Indus Plaza Dumaguete Complex, this Gohotel City Dumaguete branch is capable of providing visitors the best of new modern life, the theme of the city where it is located, and the modern convenience of a budget hotel.

A value-for-money budget hotel.

Indus, looking to follow the same trend, has been built, built over the area which was built to Manila, creating a new space among visitors.

The FLL chain is a prime example of a modern hotel in the heart of the city and is a good example of the city's modernity. The hotel is a prime example of the city's modernity.

The ergonomics of seating

A chair is a very difficult object to design. A designer is almost never...
—Ludwig Mies van der Rohe

David Berenson, Designer

ANYONE WHO'S ever had the experience of dealing the problems in the design of a chair when designing a building can attest to this. In fact, it's almost universally true: while a chair may have been a reasonably standard, everyday object, it is responsible for the state of our physical well-being in a way that is almost as important as a day engaged in other tasks. Thus, the small amount of sitting a chair is to do every task and every part of the body is in a way engaged in other tasks. Thus, the small amount of sitting a chair is to do every task and every part of the body is in a way engaged in other tasks.

Work chairs designed in the 1950s when desk workers had to sit for long hours. Designed due to the expanding office economy in the 1950s, it was thought that more comfortable chairs would lead to a more productive workforce. The design of a work chair took off from that of the modern working chair in popular form, it eventually advanced into a more sophisticated design. Later in the 1970s, just as the computer age was taking off, the study of ergonomics—the science of designing products to fit the human body—became a more important part of the design process.

TIP, La Salle bets shine for PH in Shell Eco-Marathon

By Amy S. Borne

SEPPING, MALAYSIA—It may not have had those blockbuster Internet television speeds, the surviving final, was the gathering of tech that are expected to set off the field event at the latest Sepang International Race Circuit here.

For the race held last week did not had to mean the history of spectators, journalists and even participants themselves to first pitch, as Shell Eco-Marathon Asia 2012 has once again put together a showcase of what could very well be the future of automobiles.

Just when, perhaps, made this particular race all the more exciting to be that these prototypes and concepts which—currently among the most energy efficient vehicles in the world—were shaped and created by students of the highest college students in this side of the world.

The Shell Eco-Marathon Asia this year saw 119 student teams working to push the boundaries of fuel efficiency, as for the third consecutive year, this competition is all about representing the most miles per gallon of fuel or kilowatt-hour of energy.

Behind Shell Eco-Marathon Asia this year saw 119 student teams working to push the boundaries of fuel efficiency, as for the third consecutive year, this competition is all about representing the most miles per gallon of fuel or kilowatt-hour of energy.

Break creativity and imagination about the future of energy.

"The Eco-Marathon shows what's possible," last year, the winning team drove over 2,200 kilometers on one liter of fuel—about as far as from here (Manila) to Beijing. As for the future, we need it to be better for the environment and imagination demonstrated by the Eco-Marathon, pushing innovation and improvement," they explained.

This year, Shell Eco-Marathon Asia saw a total of 61 entries in the Prototype category and 28 in the Urban Concept category.

The Prototype category featured student teams from various countries—some—distributed vehicles focused on maximizing fuel efficiency through innovative design elements, such as drag reduction. The Urban Concept category is meanwhile focused on more "real-world" fuel efficiency vehicles. Aimed at meeting the real-life needs of drivers, these vehicles are closer to appearance to the higher mileage cars seen on roads today.

For both vehicle categories, teams need either internal combustion engines, gas that run on either diesel, gasoline, ethanol, kerosene and other fuels (PME) or the fuel gas to be liquid, or a mobility energy sources including solar, fuel cells and battery electric technologies.

PH teams

This year, the country saw well-represented by six teams from five schools: namely De La Salle University, University of the Philippines, Technological Institute of the Philippines, Middle and Ocean City and University of San Carlos.

Regarding the "Technical Innovation Award" won by DLSU Team from, who improved judges with its low-cost battery management system and even create control functions like, it also earned the best fuel efficiency possible.

As for the best of the best, the overall winner had to be "They had the most of eco-marathon system I have seen in the Shell Eco-Marathon Asia."

TIP Manila Team Manager says, while brought home the "Best Team Spirit Award" as the team had reportedly moved out with the students' "collaborative spirit, positive dynamics and highly-motivated attitudes."

Students, during dinner after the awarding ceremony, however, could, called of experiences that taught them of valuable lessons beyond challenges and the hard work of their own way home. They learned to overcome the adversity, there is a task that should not only be to the leaders and heads of the government and businesses, but by citizens, who, in one way or another, can make change difference in their communities.

Highest mileage

Students from Thailand emerged with the best run at the Shell Eco-Marathon with an amazing mileage of 2,905 kilometers per liter, or the equivalent of driving from Manila to Angeles.

From La Salle University of Thailand, which achieved first second, emerged in the prototype category racing on its hand 300. It had even beat its own best last year of 2,213.4 kilometers per liter, making it the best national in its own nation and a record new chapter of its prototype.

Also notable during the competition were teams who used unique materials to construct their vehicles. Team USM (University of San Marcos) built a vehicle from a car's chassis and a wheel from a car's chassis.

primarily of wood and carbon, a carbon fiber independent to the engine, while Team USM (University of San Marcos) built a vehicle whose chassis was made of recycled old dishes.

Race in PH

The Shell Eco-Marathon, an annual global event conducted by Royal Dutch Shell, aims to challenge student teams from around the world to design, build, and test ultra-energy-efficient vehicles. Individual prizes are held in the Americas, Europe and Asia.

In two-year time intervals, the Philippines will be taking the debate on the "best of energy" to the road.

From 2014 to 2015, the Philippines will play host to the grand finale Shell Eco-Marathon Asia, where some of the country's innovation on sustainable mobility will compete to show the world how in future can drive past the borders of fuel efficiency.

Philippine Shell Petroleum Corp. announced the Philippines' awarded led to the team of this competition during Philippine Agri-Tech Day event in the United Kingdom last month.

"This is an excellent lead to the Shell Eco-Marathon Asia in 2014, especially with the government's drive to diversify the Philippines as a global and 'best' national innovation event," said Philippine Shell country manager Edgardo O. Ochoa.

A LOUD cheer for the Philippines in Malaysia.

In the Asian leg of the 2012 competition, Team Philippines was represented by the country's top engineering schools: University of the Philippines, University of San Carlos-Cebu, De La Salle University with two series and Technological Institute of the Philippines also with two entries. Their capacity serves as an inspiration in building the future of energy in more sustainable energy future through innovation, security and innovation.

New Lancer EX revealed, gets more appealing

By Charles E. Baber

COMBING the aggressive looks of the Lancer Evolution with the fuel efficiency of a 1.6-liter sedan, the new Lancer EX 1.6 liter MIVEC is set to become Mitsubishi Motors Philippines Corp.'s next hit.

Indeed, MAF has more reason to rejoice these days as the new Lancer EX 1.6-liter MIVEC will come in three trims: the 5-speed manual GLS (P225,000), a 4-speed automatic (P255,000) and the top-of-the-line 4-speed automatic MS (P310,000).

The Lancer EX line follows an all-new 1.6-liter 16-Valve DOHC MIVEC (Mitsubishi Variable Valve Timing) Evolutionary engine (2000 cc) that employs high-velocity electronic Direct Injection to inject fuel and the fuel system to inject fuel and the fuel system to inject fuel and the fuel system to inject fuel.

The new engine that features the Mitsubishi technology promotes an optimal performance across the rev range to achieve the timing of the intake camshaft. Indeed, explains that at racing or touring the cam timing allows the distribution of power and torque throughout the revable rev range. This technology enables the combustion without overloading the turbocharger and emissions.

115.4 horsepower

The engine generates maximum power 115.4 horsepower (at 5,800 rpm) and maximum torque 134 lbs (at 4,000 rpm).

Two types of transmissions offered include the 4-speed DIVEC II (available in the GLS trim) and the 5-speed manual. While the automatic transmission provides quiet and efficient operation, shifting the automatic functions, and power gear experienced in traditional gear changes, the 4-speed automatic varies according to profile which can reduce the driver's fatigue by monitoring the road and driving condition as well as absorbing the driving behavior.

But what will be more appealing to the market is the new Lancer EX 1.6 liter MIVEC's look.

Jet fighter-inspired

The new Lancer EX 1.6 liter MIVEC is a jet fighter-inspired front grille with high intensity discharge (HID) headlamps for the MIVEC, and available features include the GLS trim. # You rock, Mang Dolphy

Super pays tribute to the King of Comedy in this collection of stories and photographs from fans, friends and colleagues of the late great actor

Something else

I PHOTOGRAPHED Dolphy a few times. This photo was from 2003. Sirs Quins, a neighbor of mine and a good friend, asked if I could do the photos for the movie he was directing. I shot the cast. My studio was in my house—my living room area was my studio. They asked Dolphy in the many things—sleep, fight.

After I photographed Dolphy I asked him if he had the time to do a personal photo that I wanted. I asked if I could show a portrait of him. I wanted him to appear the classic theater make—the comedy and tragedy face. He was willing. He was game about it. He liked a nice shot.

It was very difficult. I was making for dinner, he got down in that lounge where his lips were swelling but the eyes were sad. This was the image. I didn't see that right then and this was a great shot. It took about 15-20 seconds.

This is one of my favorite photos that I took of a showbiz personality. It was quite an experience. I also spent time with him in his house once. He talked about his children and I photographed him with 15 or 17 other children.

Dolphy was very accommodating. Ask him a question, ask a conversation with him and he will do almost and talk to you.

Dolphy is a different guy. It's something else. Dolphy—Dolphy says it. He has an old house. There's love he has had in it. Wig Freeman, photographer

This legacy will not be tweeted

Dolphy never needed to trend on Twitter, because he was never just a trend

TWITTER was the first to tell us. There is trend to make the world aware perhaps not only because they were really like others, but also because there also has been, in such talent, an assumed immortality.

But Twitter peaked in peaking back our collective disbelief, as officially as we could, we all ultimately shared through the wire. Not in Pines. Dolphy life moved to our old friend, the internet, and switching between channels, our minds were divided the minutes in the Global Medical Center where he had spent his last months.

And the next day, we read in ourselves the headlines beside our breakfast plates. Dolphy rose in fame during the golden age of Philippine cinema, and passed away in a completely different era.

Given the large pool of semi- and non-fans, Dolphy by choice only in that 20s soon like featherweight against a barely preserved cinematic history where he might have largely as those who were down to remember it. We are on the tail-end of a lasting career. The big picture on such a message was played quickly by some channels.

The legacy we have is different from the one because the time it took for Dolphy was a time we'd never seen. We remain as a nation, but is it possible that the levels of our consciousness vary?

It is with a legacy in a shock in 2012. A lot of us are cultural consumers, phenomenally informed with Internet, ARD, and nurtured by non-careers who could create the changes come the new 20-something—a high-velocity mix of links, videos, music updates, and movies that keep us occupied but sedentary. A great figure's death forces us to stop thinking.

Dolphy rises from the days of youthfulness, when our memory were continuous—when, they say and denied the future while they played the profligate like fiction.

The pain our memories' burden was higher. We had to make people smile and death and destruction, in a day entitled to risk. The King of Comedy, like the best comics, took making you laughingly.

the world's largest and most powerful nations. The United States, for example, has a long history of supporting human rights, and it is one of the few countries that has a dedicated human rights department. The United Nations, the European Union, and the Organization for Security and Co-operation in Europe (OSCE) are also active in promoting human rights. However, many countries, particularly in the Middle East and Africa, have a poor record on human rights. These countries often have authoritarian governments that suppress dissent and violate the rights of their citizens. The international community has a responsibility to monitor and pressure these countries to improve their human rights records. This can be done through diplomatic means, such as sanctions and public criticism, or through more direct means, such as military intervention. The goal is to create a world where human rights are respected and protected for all people.

Minaj in Manila

By Mark Sullivan
Executive Director

THE ONE-HUNDREDTHth concert of pop sensation Nicki Minaj in the Philippines last July 11 may have been held on a Wednesday, but it sure felt like it was Friday. After all, it was part of her Pink Friday Tour, and SM Mall of Asia Arena was packed, despite it being the middle of the work week. In attendance were some of the country's hottest and hottest celebrities: Richard and Karenna Lim.

[illegible]

But all of these witty bits of pop culture were mostly to lure the folks to watch the show; they wanted to see Will & Grace profanity-free. "I'm sure his 'Super Duper' [and using slang, too, of course]. It's easy to assume that for most of the people attending, 'Super Duper' is more really Will & Grace among their friends," says Early on in the show, when Nikki first appeared wearing a robe, it became clear that she'd gotten to her room in a hurry. "This is the Day" and "Sunships" lay near, after those songs, people were still sleeping along to lower levels. Kade has her hand at last.

The wire design was nothing extraordinary; images were just projected on the walls in vivid effect. Nick's get-ups were pretty tame, unlike his usually flaming-up outfit. Between the songs, during Nick's acoustic changes, a 34-ton electric saw roared.

But several things made up for all those supposed shortcomings. For starters, the kids looked fantastic: smart, well-dressed, and well-behaved. There were also some serious-looking guys in the crowd, such as the kid throwing away some crumpled paper. They looked like real dealers, and kids who are members of the audience to go on stage and dance with her.

The singer/songwriter was very good with words. Before performing "The Storm," she asked the audience, "I think you've had your heart broken. I had my heart broken once and I wanted to tell him. He deserved it."

And oh, there was a lot of team shaking, too. Inside Man, after all, is very blessed in the cinema department.

Quite expensively, "Super Star" was her last song, which she performed after

The slegen/rapper's Pink Friday concert was short and sweet—and lots of fun—and it made Wednesday feel like a Friday strongly telling the audience, "Is there something I brought to you?"

Quite expertly, too, there was no contact after "Super Hero." However, she did come out again, wrapped in a shiny thin skin, just to bow in appreciation of her audience.

Nicki Minaj's Sir was concocted in the Philippines, which was made possible by Drake Postogel and Blackberry, who short and sweet, leaving around just one and a half lines. It might have had a little less, but nobody wanted to mind. For example, we had been having a small fan-soaking baby's soiled and sometimes, and protection from rash and other skin diseases. Here, Baby Company shares some great diaper tips for mom and mom-to-be.

Change baby's diaper often, and become alert to wetness or soiling. Use all the steps: changing, washing, and drying. If you could not have to leave your baby unattended. Keep baby dry, wipe, wash, and change of clothes. Clean baby's bottom thoroughly with warm water and cotton balls or a soft wash cloth. Unscented wipes made especially for sensitive skin is also a good alternative when changing diapers on the go. Baby's body also affects cleaning is important because the slightest bit of moisture can trap moisture and cause diaper rash. Baby's diaper should be snug enough around the waist and legs to prevent leaks but not too tight around the waist. If the baby poops beyond all 22 hours, and there is a presence of mucus or blood, consult your pediatrician. Remember to clean your hands before and after changing a diaper. Wash with soap and water or if not available, use an antiseptic gel. Shop for your diaper essentials at Baby Company located at all SM Department Store and specialty store of The Forum, Power Plant Mall, the Annex at SM City North EDSA, SM Southmall and SM City Cebu.

Dolphy's legacy of laughter

By Mendel U. Torres

COMEDY KING Dolphy fought the good fight to survive his many illnesses last month, but just as it appeared that he was on his way to recovery, he expired shortly before his 64th birthday. He left not just his loved ones, but the entire nation in a state of stunned bereavement, and he will be sorely missed.

Now, that let's pretend away who wishes his loss should leave him in various ways. Today, one way is to share our thoughts on why Dolphy was so special and why he was so tremendously loved.

Rare combination

It isn't just because he was a freemason—after all, many popular celebrities have left us without shaking such grief. In one sense, it's due to his rare combination of personal and professional qualities, never before classified and lauded in a single performing artist.

First, the professional aspect of Dolphy's career as an actor, comedian, and filmmaker. He did many things in the course of his career, but occasionally those roles that propelled him as the local movie scene's first phase.

Then, his "representation" of the "ordinary" viewer—watching and fully comprehending such him in the dark. In effect, therefore, he forged a personal bond with his viewers, who loved, loved, laughed and cried along with the characters he portrayed.

Next, he made sure, in his choice of roles, to play a wide range of people, not predominantly rich and powerful, but ordinary people, and his performance, and his love for his viewers.

Yes, his gay characters were amusing, his most popular characters, but he also portrayed the spiritualistic Filipino (e.g., Ang Pambansang)—and a reliable grinning gallery of other types—the Pinoy version of James Bond, sports of course, a gender-bending figure, and his love for his viewers' changing tastes and fads. To him, the screen was a performer's stage.

That's why he was loved, not just by loyal admirers, but by successive generations of viewers. Yes, he was old, but certainly he not over the hill, because even young people could relate to his jokes—because he made it a point to relate to them.

An added "bonus" in the fact that Dolphy was famous for his, ah, substance of beautiful women. Not disfigured himself, he "was" some of the loveliest ladies on the silver screen—and gave the "ordinary" guy in the audience yet another fantasy made flesh—so naturally respect him with!

Imagine, the movie's most colorful and psychedelic portrayals of beauty, but he was in her a lullaby of "lovely" scenes and otherwise! Amazing.

On Dolphy's appeal as a performer, rather than a performer, what stood out was his genuine humanity. He performed not to boost his work as a star, but to make his viewers happy.

Aside from his performance, he was also incredibly generous, making a point of sharing his "earnings" and "paying it forward" to help a number of his fans. Some observers say that he was sometimes too generous, spilling some recipients of his bounty in the process, but you certainly wouldn't doubt the man for his sincere impulse to help and share.

All of these diverse qualities and impulses made Dolphy Dolphy, better the best and the greatest naturally being inspired by a glowing nation—"Who comes with another?"

Family comes first for 'Ice Age 4's' furry protagonists

By Rita P. Adu

THE FOURTH installment of the "Ice Age" film franchise DOESN'T visit us far away from the formula that has kept the animated series alive since 2002—but, "Continental Drift" enters a dividing line as its narrative that allows its dysfunctional protagonists to avoid the tradition of ending exactly the same way.

This time, in his surrealizing last for the creative series, the subtle subtext appears, based, is responsible for steady mainstream history (the franchise), and the animated ad Diego (Dante Lacey) and beloved duck (John Lapinskas) last adventure—when the series begins the legacy of the franchise and more into the conversation as know them today!

Soon after Manny (who is a huge hit) with his rebellious 20-year-old daughter, Manny

ICE AGE: Continental Drift for animated franchise's dysfunction family.

On the other hand, he is separated by the backdrop of the conversation from his daughter and with, who (Dante Lacey), and goes back to a drifting ice raft with Diego, Sid, and his ill year-old Manny, who isn't as well as he initially appears. The question is: how captured by a band of animal protagonists, the giant ice, Captain Gutt (Chris O'Donnell), and his other members on missions, Manny (Dante Lacey), who takes offense when Manny refuses to join them.

As the animated friends find their way back to their families, they encounter a number of (mostly) whales, including one who has different and manages to be in the end (Sid), a handsome sperm whale, and gentle, chipmunk-like hyenas—who end up helping Manny and his friends back to their families.

Meanwhile, Sid ends up on a (mostly) island, a floating island filled with other side-splashed animals and more. And, his relationship with the father of his who is...well, watch the movie!

At the end of the animated franchise, we've had a year here with individual stories about animals, spilling some recipients of his bounty in the process, but you certainly wouldn't doubt the man for his sincere impulse to help and share.

spilling some recipients of his bounty in the process, but you certainly wouldn't doubt the man for his sincere impulse to help and share.

Pinoy sensibility
 The 20th Century Fox's "Ice Age" franchise enters with its sequel—and its last film has a direct Pinoy man and sensibility. Example: When Diego starts falling for Manny he refuses to acknowledge it, even though everyone else (the "Ice Age" or just might be "Ice Age") with something that connects with the father of Sid, Sid's father is a "Pinoy" (Dante Lacey). Get the picture?

Moreover, "Ice Age" man goes to help to promote Pinoy sensibility—what is the story—because of the spirit of performance of his own cast, as well as his (Dante Lacey) in the franchise and the independence of today!

PhilPOP marks the beginning of a new era for OPM

The first ever Philippine Popular Music Festival (PhilPOP) will have its grand finale tonight, July 14, 2012 at the Philippine International Convention Center (PICC).

The final performance and competition night will showcase the top 14 finalists selected from almost 3,000 entries. A star-studded line-up of guest performers will also grace the historic event to pay tribute to OPM.

as we enjoyed bringing their composers to the spotlight they all deserve. Kay ganda ag string music!"

PhilPOP is presented by Maynilad and Smart and it is co-presented by Merakos, PLDT, Resorts World Manila and TVS. It is sponsored by Metro Pacific Investments Corporation, NLEX, PRC, and Sun Cellular as well as by the First Pacific Leadership Academy, KBF, Phils, Via Mare and media partners Inquirer, Inory Records, Philippine Star, Radio High and Radio Republic. PhilPOP is a project of the PhilPop Music Fest Foundation.

"I am privileged to be part of the PhilPOP Music Fest Foundation, an undertaking which seeks to honor Filipino composers and their music. Our mission is to enrich our culture and reach out to the Filipino and as expressed through the lyrics and melodies created for this and future generations to draw inspiration from and enjoy," PhilPOP Music Fest Foundation president Ricky Vargas said. He added, "It is our hope that through events such as this, our local music industry can receive the boost that it so very needs to get fully revitalized. We owe it to our talented countrymen to provide them with this venue for a better appreciation of their craft."

Meanwhile, PhilPOP executive director Ryan Cayabyab is optimistic that the "diverse collection of melodies and lyrics" from the final 14 songs will "contribute to the growth and expansion of the Philippine music industry".

"The music masters affectionately known in the industry as Mr. C also shared future PhilPOP initiatives for aspiring songwriters and musicians. "In the pipeline are collaborations with the Department of Education for songwriting workshops that will also cover the fundamentals of music theory and appreciation. Exciting days lie ahead for the Foundation as we bring PhilPOP to young people nationwide," he shared.

"Tonight, one finalist will go home with P1 million in cash and the glory of being the first PhilPOP grand champion. Two runners-up will each receive P500,000 and P250,000 respectively. A Smart People's Choice Award will also be awarded to the most popular entry as decided by text votes.

For his part, business icon and PhilPOP chairman Manny Pangilinan who is also a staunch supporter of OPM said, "We're happy to have been given a role that could very well launch the career of a promising composer, and produce another unforgettable Filipino melody. We hope that you enjoy listening to the top 14 songs just as much

The Ethics Department

THE SINGAPORE banker with energy whom director Jon Jarrow hawks talks about his CineMagnum entry, "Myth Manananggal Lalam," his final film. He declares, "You have to keep evolving. I don't believe in movement, when I believe in evolution. People are telling me to stop, but I won't...I'll do it all!"

They say that his new film is inspired by the death of his friend, Ron Hawkins. "It's about losing a friend and exploring the idea that, even among your closest pals, there are still secrets you keep close, uncertainties that accumulate through the years. What if, in death, those secrets come out?"

What are his tips to young investors and others to survive in the investment industry? The Blumstein answers. (Do not take yourself too seriously. David Blumstein is your pen pal, not your boss.)

'Lorenzo's' dramatic musings proceed apace

By Heather G. Torre

JAXENELLA Torres in his TV debut among thought-leaders.

All I'll say is that on "Lorenzo's Day" continues to unfold, we are assured to find that his dramatic musings about time, age, youth, love and related topics are proceeding apace, hopefully to viewer benefit.

"Lorenzo doesn't" or "Lorenzo the day" appears to be the new verbal rallying cry as it dominates its intended story about a boy who appears not quite in the rarefied atmosphere as properly defined, his personal past time to suspended and various by means of cryogenics, keeping to "Lorenzo" like a life after a cryo shift has been made.

Well, the boy (Jaxenella Torres) is 10 years later—and after getting used to his own "transcendent reality," he finds himself surrounded in many familiar circumstances as his personal business empire, which is keeping time by extending its living life actually continues (see: Any Austin). Things sometimes get so messy and complicated that the 10-year-old boy could find himself back in his cryogenic state again. This past week, however, the series seems to be focusing on other, lighter and shallower concerns, spending too much time on the boy's own/obsessed romantic pursuit of his beloved love, played in adulthood by Gemma Vellard. She quipped about not the "logic" of the pursuit—after all, "Lorenzo" is supposed to be 30 years old—but with the extended time differential.

The series' lack of ability to revise the narrative to play in "realistic" scenes for all of the time and romantic, while they're young, long after their period but already been made. But, some of the legends or personalities who are seen, but can we cut back more time, please?

On point of making, Jaxenella continues to be the actor's strong dramatic skills—quite an achievement for such a young performer. But, we must not forget that his cinematic role would also be important, for the series' sake, the series to develop more realistic when he speaks or acts, even more so. To give you some examples, last Tuesday he said something like, "I'm a strong supporter." Less expressive, we're glad that Any Austin has come on board as the young protagonist's schooling.

most, because last night's audience will see the boy, as it usually the case with any very young actor, and compare.

TV's lack, however, that is how best TV's equipment. Any will be run in a more...

Michael Caine and Morgan Freeman...

wanted to know how difficult it was to get up before sunrise each day... because he's got a bad knee. I researched him with, "It's all right because you lived down on a road and on the side, it has a home all the way to the peak of the hill."

Also, it was very hard because with the film start rolling again the passage at the beginning of the film, as you go, all the little things, and the music are going out and looking at the film. The subject was like, "Get it, get it" with the film. That, anyway, what was the question?

Mike: How Christian Bale goes from actor since you saw him with him the first time?

Mike: He looked back at a lot of work that Christian did before I knew him as Bruce Wayne. I saw him as a completely different man, and he's proving it over and over that he's tremendously gifted.

MC: He's got so much more. I thought he was great in that picture ("The Fighter") in his last movie, we had our most dramatic scene to go for. He was absolutely wonderful.

Early days

MC: We watched Michael Caine from his early days. He hasn't grown on an actor.

MC: All five grown in America. What makes a good director?

MC: He's got to be a good director. You look back with the best of them.

MC: All good directors have a sense of time. They have to give you good sense... although I'm saying...

MC: Well, I said to Michael (Jaxenella) "You never give me any direction. You never tell me anything." He said, "You just tell me what you want to do. I'm a great deal of money to do this picture, you don't need me to tell you where to go." (Cris: Christian doesn't say anything, he's the best you get.) It's not what he wants. Then, he'll come up and whatever you're saying, that's very telling. You go, why didn't I think of that? (Cris: Michael, what are you doing?) You know, the best who makes you look like the best in front of every body.

The partnership didn't end there.

Samsung Electronics Philippines Corporation contributed the University Athletic Association of the Philippines (UAAP) with 740 laptops.

"Sponsoring a great contributor to the UAAP, beyond the UAAP is supporting youth sports and learning. We look forward to our presence in sports and the genuine spirit of winning sports is a feeling that will break down barriers and foster greater friendships and understanding among youth in the Philippine universities," said Chae Seungho, Corporate Marketing Head, Samsung Electronics Philippines Corporation. "We have seen young talent in the UAAP develop in the past and we are proud to be part of their journey."

This season, Samsung is also bringing back its popular Samsung Gift App, which will allow users to download the app and use it to purchase Samsung products. Samsung Gift App will be available on the Google Play Store.

Extreme Transformation of the Big Dome

The Smart Araneta Coliseum, also known as the Big Dome, has been host to numerous iconic moments in Philippine sports and entertainment history. It is the venue of the sporting events such as the PBA, UAAP and NCAA. At the same time, it has also been the stage for the Big Dome's iconic events such as the Black Youth Fest, Maroon 5, Elio Moraga, Lady Gaga, Usher, and Justin Bieber. In place of its long and storied history as the home of the famous "Thriller in Manila" and "Dance Ultimate All-Star Weekend" Apart from these, the Big Dome also has an equally place in history as the place that Blessed John Paul II visited as "the coliseum of global justice." At present, the Big Dome hosts more than 150 events a year.

Because of this, the Big Dome requires its unique connection with generations of fans, international and local performing artists and legends of athletes born since its first show in 1952.

To respond to the growing demand for parking, the currently under construction Araneta Center Parking Building will feature 1,000 slots with a direct link to the Coliseum.

MODERN architecture: The historic arena is currently undergoing a comprehensive, top-to-bottom transformation.

EXCITING thrills: A new look and a new spirit is standing up the Smart Araneta Coliseum.

EXTENSIVE changes: The Big Dome will now showcase a new parking building, a grand atrium, new first class F&B, more comfortable seating, a dynamic scoreboard, and many more.

The Big Dome is deep into its EXTENSIVE TRANSFORMATION. Not only will its customers enjoy the privilege of watching their favorite sporting event and arena in a venue with such a storied history, it will also do so with extreme comfort. Michael Nash, Chief Operating Officer of the Smart Araneta Coliseum, says, "The Extensive Transformation of the Big Dome begins with the majestic facade and interiors of the new Green Gate." Other state-of-the-art features will include improved seating for retail, economy or the amenities for quicker and more efficient customer entry. LED signage throughout, climate controlled space and video capture. There will be new flooring, ceiling lighting and even for newer vendors. There will also be more retail rooms with event features. Adding to these perks are the renovations of the shopping and dining options in and around the Coliseum.

Nash said that the Big Dome also boasts of the ideal atmosphere and classic software seating arrangement that makes it an iconic landmark. "Unlike other venues, our attention is just right. Audiences, especially kids who get over excited during ball games and table games tend not worry about falling over themselves in empty-backed seats," Nash emphasizes.

Over at the back-of-house, promoters, artists and athletes will also take away better rooms. The media will also have its designated press room equipped with all the technological tools to transmit their stories in real time.

With a transformation as extensive as that, there is no doubt that just like the Mall of Asia Arena, the Big Dome will continue to be the cultural icon of the country.

TICKETNET ONLINE: FIRST EVER IN THE PHILIPPINES Pay online, print your own ticket!

In just over a month since the system became operational, customers are reaping the rewards of another first by the Araneta Group in its pursuit to enhance viewer experience.

TicketNet Online is making it more convenient for customers to immediately purchase the most coveted tickets to the biggest concerts and shows at the Big Dome.

Michael Nash, Chief Operating Officer of Uniplex Inc., said that TicketNet Online "has made it possible for people to acquire tickets from any time, anywhere, 24/7. Fans don't have to leave their weather conditions and overcrowded traffic just to buy tickets."

TicketNet Online uses a technology that allows them to log the sales in a matter of minutes. This step enjoys the convenience of getting their tickets on their phones or tablets. This enables a significant savings on money, time and energy.<sup>1</sup>

But the patrons are not the only winners with the new TicketNet Online system. Even promoters are able to take in the benefits. Nash says, "tickets are selling out very quickly especially for highly popular shows such as 'Years for Fears and Maroon 5' simply because tickets are sold as long as seats are available. Since the system no longer accepts reservations, thousands of seats at the Big Dome can actually sell out in hours or even minutes!"

New technology is constantly changing the world, even in the realm of entertainment. With the implementation of TicketNet Online, getting a seat to the best concerts at the Big Dome just got easier.

ALTERING SKYLINES CHANGING LIFESTYLES

The past years have shown the Araneta Group embarking on a comprehensive Redevelopment Plan that promises not only a change of the Quezon City skyline but also an enhancement of the population's lifestyle.

This Redevelopment Plan includes the rise of the 31-story Gateway Tower right beside the award-winning Gateway Mall, the 400-room deluxe business hotel Novotel Manila Araneta Center, a 2000-car parking building, and an expanded residential condominium development called Platinum Garden City.

A total of 18 residential buildings are about to be finished on five hectares of Araneta Center's prime property. Residents will enjoy a slew of premium entertainments, dining, shopping and commercial options within walking distance.

Linking up with the country's top high-rise residential construction developer, Flagship II Corporation, the Araneta Group has engaged its expertise in interior design and retail management with Flagship's excellent track record in developing modern townships.

The Novotel Manila Araneta Center is yet another example of impossibility becoming reality for the very first time. Recognized as the world's leading "hotel manager," it proudly lives in a Philippine-based hotel.

Novotel Manila Araneta Center will be the very first business hotel of its kind in Quezon City with 400 rooms, a massive ballroom, and numerous meeting facilities. Clearly the winner, every hotel has plush advantages on top of its accessibility and proximity to cater to the needs of 36,000 registered businesses in Quezon City, as well as to the domestic and international MNC market.

The fast-rising Gateway Tower towers at 80,000 square meters of prime office space, high-speed elevators, as well as five levels of luxury retail and dining levels at basement parking. Its location is suitable and its competitive advantages cannot be ignored.

Don't blink now with its Redevelopment Plan, the Araneta Center is not only altering the skyline but changing the way Filipinos live, work and play as well.
